The symptoms of Catarch, as they generally appear, are at first very slight. Persons find they have a cold, that they have frequent attacks, and are more sensitive to the changes of temperature. In this condition, the nose may be dry, or a slight discharge, thin and seried, afterwards becoming thick and adhesive. As the discase becomes chronic the discharges are increased in quantity and changed it quality; they are now thick and heavy and are hawked or conghet off. The secretions are offsative, causing a bad breath; the voice is thick and nasea; the eyes are weak; the sense of the smell is lessened or destroyed; deathess frequestly issue place. Another common and important symptom of Catarch is, that the person is obliged to clear his threat in the morning of a thick or sliny mucus, which has failen down from the head during the night. When this takes place the person may be sure that his disease is on its way to the lungs, and should loss no time in arresting it. SYMPTOMS:
